AUGUST WEDNESDAYS • SUMMER NIGHTS AT HAGLEY

SEPTEMBER 15 • HAGLEY CAR SHOW

OCTOBER 19 & 20 • HAGLEY CRAFT FAIR

WHILE I LOVE MY DAILY WALKS throughout the Hagley property, before I head out, I make sure I have the proper shoes, sunglasses, and sunscreen. I can relate to the Author Talk on September 26 by Rachel Gross about how trips into nature usually start with a shopping trip. Being out in nature is big business! Consumers spend an astounding amount each year just to get outside. Her talk explores many themes related to her book, Shopping All the Way to the Woods: How the Outdoor Industry Sold Nature to America. This is the first of two fall Author Talks, with the second on December 5 featuring David Alff and his book, The Northeast Corridor: The Trains, the People, the History, the Region.

Fall is a busy time at Hagley as we welcome two of our most notable annual events, the Hagley Car Show and the Hagley Craft Fair. We celebrate the British Invasion at the Car Show on September 15 as we feature British cars known for their classic style. Tickets are now on sale online and at the Hagley Visitor Center.

The Craft Fair, October 19 and 20, is also a stylish event with wares from more than 100 artisans and vendors. While I love the artistry of the crafts and always buy holidays gifts for family at the Fair, for myself, I head to the Specialty Food Market. Each year there are new tastes to explore and foods to try.

With Hagley’s mission to inspire people to be innovative in their own lives, it is fitting that at the 2024 National History Day Delaware event Hagley presented three awards, including The American Innovation Award, and The American Technology

Award in the Junior and Senior Division. This annual competition truly inspires students in grades 6 -12 to innovate while keeping a focus on the past. Hagley is proud to be a part of this important competition.

Enjoy our fall edition of the magazine! As the weather cools down, I hope to see you walking on our trails, no special gear necessary!

Hagley Car Show: The British Invasion

THIS YEAR'S HAGLEY CAR SHOW features classic British cars often known for their unique styles, craftsmanship, and history. From the elegant curves of a Jaguar E-Type to the iconic grille of a Bentley, these cars embody artistic automotive design. The attention to detail in their interiors, use of high-quality materials, and handcrafted finishes set them apart. Many classic British cars were produced in limited quantities, making them inherently rare. Hagley welcomes these rare vehicles to the Feature Field on Sunday, September 15, with a "British Invasion" theme.

Scott Adams will show his 1961 Morris Motors Mini Traveler, with stunning Union Jack roofing. The original Mini is considered an icon of 1960s British popular culture. Its space-saving transverse engine and front-wheel drive layout influenced a generation of car makers. Seth Rochette plans to show his 1979 MGB. The MGB was first released in 1962 to satisfy the demand for a more modern and comfortable sports car.

The ticketing structure is changing in two important ways. Interest in the Hagley Car Show is greater than the physical capacity of Hagley's historic property. To improve the experience for all guests, admission will only be offered through pre-sale, with no option for day-of purchase. Admission will be sold by the carload rather than individual tickets. Visit hagley.org/carshow for tickets and information.

Hagley Author Talks

HAGLEY'S FALL AUTHOR TALKS will open on September 26 with Rachel Gross speaking about her new book, Shopping All the Way to the Woods: How the Outdoor Industry Sold Nature to America. In it, Gross explores the irony of how trips into nature usually start with shopping in an outdoor recreational store or browsing through online offerings. With consumers spending billions of dollars on clothing and equipment each year as they seek out nature, the American outdoor sector grew over the past 150 years from a small collection of outfitters to an industry contributing more than 2 percent of the nation's economic output.

Drawing on material from the Hagley Library's holdings on DuPont, as well as documents from Gore, Gross argues that this success was predicated not just on creating functional equipment but also on selling an authentic, anticommercial outdoor identity. Gross is an assistant professor at the University of Colorado, Denver. She received several grants from Hagley to support her research for this book.

David Alff will speak about his book, The Northeast Corridor: The Trains, the People, the History, the Region at the fall's second author talk on December 5. It is the first comprehensive history of the most heavily traveled train line in the United States. Alff shows how these nineteenth-century train tracks transformed hundreds of miles of Atlantic shoreline into a political capital, a global financial hub, and home to fifty million people. The Northeast Corridor reveals how freight trains, commuter rail, and Amtrak influenced—and in turn were shaped by—centuries of American industrial expansion, metropolitan growth, downtown decline, and revitalization.

Paying as much attention to Aberdeen, Trenton, New Rochelle, and Providence as to New York City, Philadelphia, and Baltimore (and drawing heavily on Hagley's railroad collections), Alff provides narrative thrills for history buffs, train enthusiasts, and adventurers alike. Alff is an associate professor at the State University of New York – Buffalo.

Art, Food, & More!

HAGLEY'S ANNUAL CRAFT FAIR on October 19 and 20 features hand-crafted items from more than 100 artisans and vendors. Crafts will be featured outdoors throughout the scenic grounds of Hagley's upper property, indoors at the Soda House, and surrounding outdoor areas of the Soda House, including the Specialty Food Market.

In the Specialty Food Market, a crowd favorite is Michelle Fox of Smackerals Bakery from Middletown, Delaware. Her wonderful selection includes cookies, whoopie pies, mini apple pies, and croissants.

Katie Mangum will be bringing her Nutty Novelties to Hagley for the first time. Since 2014 she has been making nut butters and has a line of twenty varieties, all with the philosophy of keeping them high in protein, low in sugar, all natural and made by hand in Telford, Pennsylvania.

Barbara Land of Middletown, Delaware, is a metalsmith who creates one-of-a-kind wearable art pieces intended to connect to one's spirit. Made primarily of silver and natural stone, the pieces are inspired by her experiences in nature. A surprise message for the wearer can often be found on the reverse.

Another newcomer, Robert Bizup of Downingtown, Pennsylvania will bring his Raysun Designs to the fair. Bizup's current focus is mixed media 3D sculpture design. He will feature his Home Pendant collection, inspired by Scandinavian design and Nordic folklore. All his pieces are hand-crafted of stone, wood, textiles, and other natural materials found while traveling across the country.

Since the event started as a textile fair in 1978, the Craft Fair strives to keep that tradition alive, and the Harmony Weavers Guild helps Hagley to do that. The guild has been participating in the fair for many years and features the work of several of their 80 members who spin and dye yarn, weave, and create other fiber arts. The guild booth will be in its usual spot in the lower level of the Soda House.

Craft Fair admission will include the du Pont family home and garden, and the exhibits in the barn. The Hagley Store and Hagley Handwork Group will both have booths in a new location inside the Library. A variety of food trucks will be available for lunch, and Wilmington Brew Works will sell their brews. Shuttle buses will be running throughout the event.

Game On! with Hagley Unboxed

T O MARK INTERNATIONAL GAMES MONTH in November, Hagley will host weekly board-game nights at the new Hagley Unboxed event. All month long, people are invited to play reproduction versions of historical games in Hagley's archives. These games are an entertaining way to engage with big business, advertising, career development, and other topics related to Hagley's collecting mission. The games include:

Careers – Fame? Fortune? Happiness? The Choice Is Yours!

Design your own path to success and explore various twentieth century occupations along the way.

What Shall I Be? – The Exciting Game of Careers for Girls/Boys

Have fun navigating mid-century gender roles while achieving career success.

The Boss Game – Work your way to the top of the ladder in this cutthroat corporate competition.

Go for Broke – Spend-a-Million Game – Win by losing your money the fastest at excursions to the racetrack and casino.

Ulcers – Survive a fiscal year with no tax fraud or raids from your opponents.

Hagley Unboxed also features an exhibition on the history of board games and the chance for attendees to design a modern version of Careers.

Hagley Unboxed takes place in Hagley's Library from 6 to 9 p.m. on Wednesdays, November 6, 13, 20. Space is limited, and advance (free) registration is required. Light refreshments will be available for purchase. Registration and additional information will be available at hagley.org/unboxed. Please email any questions to Hannah Spring Pfeifer, hpfeifer@hagley.org.

Support for Hagley Unboxed is provided by the Delaware Library Association.

Collaboration in Conservation

THOMAS LAMB was an industrial designer whose attention to anatomy, people's varying body sizes and abilities, and universal functionality formed the foundation of the Universal Design movement. The Library Conservation department at Hagley prioritized the Thomas Lamb collection in 2023 because of degradation in the plastics used in his groundbreaking consumer items.

An important step in that effort occurred in 2024 with University of Delaware undergraduate art conservation majors using a non-destructive analytical technique to identify these mystery plastics.

Understanding the material composition of items in Hagley's care is crucial for their long-term preservation. In the past 200 years, society has developed numerous semi-synthetic and manmade polymers, used to fulfill the need for flexible, lightweight, durable, translucent, and colorful products. These artifacts have differing sensitivities. Some may degrade due to moisture in the air, while others require cold-temperature storage to avert deterioration from inherent chemical instability.

Physical characteristics such as elasticity, gloss, translucence, and odor may be enough to distinguish some plastic types, but analytical methods allow for more conclusive identification.

Winterthur Museum, Garden & Library, a neighbor to Hagley and another du Pont family site, is home of the Scientific Research & Analysis Laboratory. The items in the Lamb collection are ergonomic handle designs for consumer products, including cookware, knives, sporting goods, and luggage. Most were created in the first half of the twentieth century, a period of innovation in plastics formulations.

The students, under the guidance of their advisor Dr. Liora Mael, used Fourier Transform Infrared Spectroscopy to collect surface reflectance data, and they compared resulting graphs to known items in a materials database. This method allows for identification of the chemical makeup of art and heritage materials without the need to remove a sample from the artifact, therefore avoiding damage. Each material generates a unique spectrum, related to the way the atomic structure is excited by the wavelengths of energy emitted by the FTIR equipment.

Students Hailey Kremenek, Susie Stovell, Clara Anderson, and Vivian Sanchez created a workflow for documenting the handles and organizing the data collected. Their work and reports will be used to develop storage plans for these artifacts.

The students felt it was a terrific opportunity for them to learn the capabilities and limitations of the method and to understand some characteristic chemical "fingerprints" of materials, from cellulose nitrate to epoxy. Anderson mentioned how rewarding it was to apply her knowledge from chemistry courses to the analysis of such a varied and unique set of items. They also did background research to understand more about the history of the collection and the perspective of the designer. Sanchez enjoyed learning how passionate Lamb was about conveying design as an art form and how his creations were made for bettering the lives of others.

Three Special Awards

AMERICAN INNOVATION AWARD WINNERS
CARTER LUNSFORD, CLAIRE KEACH, AND JOHNATHAN BARRY

AT THE 2024 NATIONAL HISTORY DAY Delaware State event in May, Hagley Museum and Library staffers presented three special awards to participating students. NHD Delaware is hosted by the Delaware Historical Society and was held for the second year at the DSU downtown campus in Dover.

The American Innovation Award – for the best project related to the design and development of new ideas, methods, or products in the United States and its territories – went to Newark Charter School students Carter Lunsford, Claire Keach and Jonathan Barry in the Senior Division – Group Documentary. Their project, Unmasking the Past: How the Influenza of 1918 Changed Public Health Forever, was mentored by Brent Freccia.

The American Technology Award – for the best project related to the study and creation of technology in the United States and its territories – went to Sanford School student Nico Mucchetti in the Junior Division – Individual Documentary. His project, The Wright Brothers: How Flight Has Changed the World, was mentored by Sarah Cushing.

The American Technology Award also went to Newark Charter School students Pranavi Kona and William Ross in the Senior Division – Group Website. Their project, Big Boom in Atomic Industry: Glenn Seaborg's Discovery of Plutonium and Its Effect on the Cold War, was mentored by Brent Freccia.

The annual competition allows American students in grades 6-12 to explore their passion for the past. They enter projects in one category, from the traditional paper essay to exhibits and websites, and the category winners advance to the next stage. Competition happens at the school, regional, state, and national level. Students also have the opportunity to be nominated for special awards.

Awardees were nominated by the judges for their respective categories and selected by Hagley's Library Coordinator Hannah Spring Pfeifer and Head of Reference Services Angela Schad.

Where in the World are Hagley's Patent Models?

YOU MAY COME ACROSS some of Hagley's patent models in unexpected places. Most recently, Hagley sent a group of patent models out on loan to the Tellus Science Museum, also a Smithsonian Affiliate, in Cartersville, Georgia. Tellus's newest exhibition, which features twelve of Hagley's nineteenth-century patent models, is titled "Patents: The Engine of Invention," and is on view until February 23, 2025.

And soon, another selection of Hagley's patent models will become a part of the Library Foundation of Los Angeles and the Los Angeles Public Library's exhibition titled "No Prior Art." This project is part of the Getty Foundation's third Pacific Standard Time initiative, focusing on bridging the gap between arts and science. The project "will explore how the creative process of invention nurtures new ideas and technology across the full spectrum of arts and sciences, and can often blur the boundaries between these fields," the organizers have written. The show, and accompanying public programs, will run from September 2024 through May 2025.

Closer to home, Hagley's museum collections team are getting ready to refresh an exhibition of patent models at The Mill in downtown Wilmington. Since 2016, a selection of Hagley's patent models have been on display in The Mill's lobby space. Models have been swapped out to create inspiring new displays for The Mill's members to enjoy.

Fall Cars & Crafts

FALL IS FOR CARS AND CRAFTERS. Whether you choose to curl up with a bit of auto history, enjoy a bit of floral crafting, or tackle a UGEARS model, the Museum Store has an activity for you.

This fall, the Museum Store has a wonderful selection of books about all types of autos for the car enthusiast. Read up on local car racing with Delaware Auto Racing or perhaps the Legends of Delaware Auto Racing. If auto history is more your speed, pick up a copy of Car Crazy and steer through the battle for supremacy between the Ford Motor and Olds Motor Vehicle companies.

Looking for something a little more hands-on without the grease? The Museum Store has a nice selection of auto-related UGEARS. Create your own working model of a car differential. There is also the model retro car, and if you're looking for something with two wheels you can build your own Indie Moto. All UGEARS models are laser-cut, mechanical, and functional, and they don't need glue for assembly.

For the fall crafters, Kikkerland has a fine selection of floral needlepoint. Looking to create your own bit of garden stamping? The Museum Store has flower and bug stamp kits that include everything you need to create your own personalized cards and stationery. If you're looking to preserve the flowers from your garden, a flower press could be the solution. Dried and pressed flowers can be just the right craft for preserving the memories of your beautiful garden.

HAGLEY MEMBERS RECEIVE A DISCOUNT ON ALL HAGLEY STORE PURCHASES!

NOVEMBER 1 – FRIDAY

Hagley Fall Conference: Real Estate Development and the Built Environment

Despite the central role that real estate development plays in the physical form and geography of buildings, cities, and suburbs in market economies, scholars have engaged in relatively little research on the inner workings of its figures and processes in relation to the built environment. Hagley's conference will bring together in conversation scholars from these and related fields in the humanities and social sciences to explore the relationships between private, for-profit real estate and architecture, urbanism, and landscape design. Visit hagley.org/conf for information and registration.
